* Please provide a description of the class of shares to confirm whether each relevant category of shares held by a member carries voting rights under the articles of association of the company, and if so, whether such voting rights are conditional. "voting rights" means—

(a) rights conferred on shareholders in respect of their shares or, in the case of an entity not having a share capital, on members, to vote at general meetings of the entity on all or substantially all matters; and (b) in relation to a legal entity that does not have general meetings at which matters are decided by the exercise of voting rights, the rights conferred upon shareholders or members, as applicable, that are equivalent to those of a person entitled to exercise voting rights in a company.

A voting right is conditional where the voting right arises only in certain circumstances.
